Historical Note

Town police officers, organized under the Town of Watertown Police Department, are charged with the protection of citizens, prevention of crime, enforcement of by-laws and regulations, direction of traffic, and general maintenance of law and order. The Town of Watertown appointed its first professional police officer in 1864. For the next few decades, the Department consisted of only two regular officers and a handful of paid and unpaid special police. The first Police Chief was appointed in 1893 to oversee a force of five regular officers. By 1900, the size of the Department had doubled. By 1920, it consisted of eighteen patrolmen, one sergeant, and two lieutenants, all serving under the Chief of Police.

Watertown police work changed considerably around 1900, when the town installed a police signal system. In addition to responding to police signals, patrol officers monitored their districts for suspicious activity and threats to property. In addition to regular tasks, like directing traffic, checking for unlocked doors, and recovering lost property, police also occasionally participated in liquor raids and took town censuses.

Scope and Content Note

This collection consists of four logbooks maintained by police officers of varying ranks. Logbooks document daily police activities and incidents in Watertown. Logs include descriptions of incidents (e.g. missing person reported, traffic light broken), names of persons involved (suspects, victims), locations, and dispositions. The 1908-1909 book is missing a title page; the first remaining page is labeled "10.477 Stephen J. Quinn 59 Elmwood St. Newton / 20 H. Stanley" and "Harry Marie 302 Washington St. Brighton."
